DataVision serves customers in Gervais and in areas of Woodburn, Hubbard, Brooks, and Salem. The company is the Incumbent Local Exchange Carrier (ILEC) for our Gervais service territory - that means we are required by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) to provide telecommunications services for residents in this area. Customers in the ILEC boundary are part of the Gervais Telephone Company Cooperative. While those outside of it are not part of the co-op, they still receive the same local customer care and support.

What’s a Cooperative?

A utility cooperative (co-op) is a collaborative business model that is tasked with the delivery of a public utility such as electricity, water, or telecommunications to its members. Profits are either reinvested into the infrastructure or are distributed to members in the form of “capital credits”, which are essentially dividends paid on a member’s investment into the cooperative.

More than 1.2 million Americans receive their local telephone, and now internet, from a company like DataVision. As a member-owned cooperative, our members are also our owners and they have a voice in the company - whether it is by attending an annual meeting or submitting a letter to the Board of Directors. About 230 of these telecommunications cooperatives are still operating throughout the United States.
